Accelerate learning through producing value & dialogue

@z2ahmad

Peter Senge cites the work of David Bohm on group dialogue.[3] Dialogue, according to Bohm, occurs when a group becomes open to the flow of a larger intelligence. That is the purpose of any group work (teams, partnerships, alliances): to create a larger collective intelligence. Bohm presents dialogue as a synthesis of the systems, holistic view of nature, and the interactions between our thinking models and our perceptions and actions. A full explanation of dialogue is beyond the scope of this book. I introduce it only to raise awareness of the different nature of partnering and to show what Bohm considers the three conditions necessary for dialogue, and hence effective partnering, to occur:

1. All participants must suspend their initial assumptions.
2. All participants must regard one another as colleagues.
3. There must be a facilitator who holds the context of dialogue (i.e., maintains the flow of dialogue versus argumen-

Guide

- You can opt out. (Just sit down)
- Teams should be 5-9 people
- Team's should have a mixture of Experience in LeSS. Red, blue
- Suggest each team have a developer (Purple)
- Suggest each team have a visual artist (pink)
- Try and choose people you don't know. Avoid your own co-workers
- Each team should assign it's own facilitator

Create something that's useful to the agile community.

- Teams who have created a master piece are invited to demonstrate it during tomorrow's sprint bazar hosted by Craig.

- Suggest experimenting with mob programming pattern.
